

HOW TO HELP SOMEONE IN AN ABUSIVE RELATIONSHIP

It may be hard to know what to do if you think your friend, family member or coworker is in an abusive relationship. You may want to keep the following tips in mind when you are trying to help someone in an abusive relationship.

Be available to help, but don't try to force a particular course of action.

- › Let them know that you're there to support them.
- › Do not push them to make a change that they're not ready to make.
- › Remember there can be many reasons a person believes he or she needs to stay in an abusive relationship.

Don't blame them for their shame and embarrassment about their situation.

- › Try not to pass judgment. This will add to their negative feelings.
- › Ask permission before you make any suggestions.
- › Do not take it personally if they don't take your advice.

Help with "reality checks."

- › Make sure the person knows that what his or her partner is doing is not okay. No one "deserves" abusive treatment. Many people in an abusive situation don't know what a healthy relationship looks like.
- › Let them know that the abuse is not their fault.
- › Point out that physical or emotional abuse in a relationship is not acceptable.

Respect confidentiality.

- › If your friend, family member or coworker chooses not to tell anyone except you, respect their privacy. It could be a matter of safety as well as confidentiality.
- › If you have concerns that keeping the situation private may endanger the person or others, contact one of the resources listed below for help.

Consider ways you are willing to help if they leave.

- › If the person decides to leave the relationship, he or she may need help finding a place to stay, a place to store belongings, help with childcare, or help getting to a shelter.
- › Help them develop a safety plan.
- › Make sure to consider your own safety needs. Do not put yourself in a position of risk. Think about what you are willing and able to provide when the time comes.

Make them aware of local resources.

- › You can help by providing information about domestic violence resources and safety planning.

with resources out of concern for someone else.
